Airline, union reach deal

- ▶ Air Canada says it will be business as usual while ratification vote goes ahead
- ▶ In August, flight attendants rejected a tentative deal union negotiated with the airline

With hours to go until the strike deadline, Air Canada reached a tentative contract agreement with the union representing flight attendants yesterday afternoon.

The Canadian Union of Public Employees said it was recommending Air Canada's 6,800 flight attendants accept the deal, details of which won't be made public until after a vote is held.

A strike deadline was set for just after midnight this morning, though federal Labour Minister Lisa Raitt had warned she would introduce back-to-work legislation.

It was a turbulent situation ever since talks broke down on Monday. A number of rallies were held across the country yesterday, including at Halifax Stanfield International Airport.

Deborah Archur, a flight attendant for 29 years, said she was recently working on a flight in Munich that was delayed to the next day — her day off — and she wasn't paid "a penny extra."

"Does anyone else go to work for free?" she asked.

▶ Flight attendant Lisa Vivian Macdonald speaks to her colleagues at a rally outside Halifax Stanfield International Airport yesterday morning. Air Canada's flight attendants were set to go on strike this morning, but the airline and the Canadian Union of Public Employees reached a deal late yesterday afternoon.

Fitzpatrick said the company's preference was to reach a deal with CUPE without the federal government stepping in with back-to-work legislation.

Flight attendants in Halifax responded yesterday by chanting, "Negotiate, not legislate!"

"We want to have an opportunity to share what our plight is and what we're dealing with," said flight attendant Heidi Cohen. "As a Canadian, I believe we should have the right to protest, picket and have our voices heard if it comes to it."

Otter Lake landfill could save millions

ALY THOMSON
HALIFAX@METRONEWS.CA

Last night Halifax Regional Council approved a recommendation that could save millions in operating costs at the Otter Lake landfill outside Halifax.

Regional Council agreed to the terms of a tentative supplementary agreement with Mirror

N.S., the private firm that runs the landfill for the city.

According to a staff report brought before council last night, starting in the 2012-13 fiscal year, there will be an annual cost reduction of an average $7.45 per tonne of waste, resulting in operating savings of approximately $1 million per year over the remaining four years of the agreement with Mirror.

Although one part of the report was approved unanimously last night, it was part two that generated discussion around the council table: Staff recommended bringing back a review of the existing waste resource strategy to identify opportunities to improve diversion and to identify efficiencies.

Coun. Jennifer Watts said the report should have come to the environmental sustainability standing committee before going before council.

Along with many others, Coun. Sue Uteck echoed Watts' concerns, calling the report "unprecedented" in the way it landed before council.

Halifax Regional Municipality and Mirror have a six-year contract that started in 2010.

Ex-cop set to run for mayor

► First contender for Mayor Peter Kelly's office makes it official

ALEX BOUTILIER

The starting gun has sounded for the Halifax Regional Municipality's 2012 mayoral race.

Tom Martin, a retired police officer, officially announced his candidacy at Alderney Landing in Dartmouth yesterday.

Flanked by two banners encouraging citizens to "Ask For More" — which appears to be his campaign's main slogan — Martin said he believed the current administration has run its course.

"The days of backroom details, absence of accountability and lack of vision must come to an end," Martin told a group of reporters, campaign workers and supporters. "A municipal government that is not able to set priorities, that does not answer to the citizens, that cannot admit missteps, that will not work together nor engage in rational debate benefits no one."

Martin said yesterday that it would be premature to unveil his platform but he gave a brief sketch of his policy priorities: Making HRM more business-friendly, retaining young people, making communities safer, encouraging sustainability and developing what he calls the "Halifax experience" — a varied list of items including culture, integrated transit, immigration and prosperity.

The 30-year veteran of the Halifax Regional Police did not mention Kelly by name, but it was clear he had him in mind for some of his most pointed remarks.

"The mayor is a term position, it's not a career. The office of mayor cannot be used as a political stepping stone, and we can never allow the office of mayor to be used as an alternative political position," said Martin. "We deserve more."

Tracking the money

► Audit ordered for now-defunct development agency ► Study was prompted by citizen complaints

A forensic audit will determine what happened to money given to a now-defunct regional-development agency that lost more than $200,000 in loans and left some municipalities on the hook for a $590,000 line of credit, the Nova Scotia government confirmed yesterday.

Percy Paris, the economic and rural development minister, said the audit into the South West Shore Development Authority will begin within the next month.

"It's an attempt to find some answers that the citizens of Nova Scotia ... and the businesses in the southwest region deserve some answers to," Paris said in an interview. "There's some things that haven't been accounted for."

In a February 2010 report, provincial ombudsman Dwight Bishop said considerable concerns had been raised about the agency's management and administration.

Among other things, Bishop found the board didn't follow provincial guidelines for spending $600,000 the province gave the authority in 2005 as a maintenance fund for the former Shelburne Youth Centre.

No towers for old YMCA site

► Halifax council voted 20-2 to reject amendments to building-height rules near Lake Banook canoe clubs

HALIFAX@METRONEWS.CA

The former Dartmouth YMCA site will remain a patch of grass for now, after Halifax regional council rejected a strategy that would allow the development of two apartment buildings.

United Gulf Developments Ltd. proposed to build two 17-storey towers with 128 residential units on the Lake Banook site.

But the proposal is not in keeping with the Municipal Planning Strategy, which says buildings in that area cannot be taller than 11 metres.

In 2003, United Gulf Developments submitted a proposal to build two 12-storey towers on the same site and was turned down.

The purpose of the height limit is to prevent tall buildings from altering wind patterns that would negatively impact the Lake Banook canoe-racing course. A 2003 wind study concluded that a 12-storey building would not affect the wind on the course, but councillors were skeptical.

"It's kind of a gamble as to whether the wind would or wouldn't affect the race course, but once these buildings are up, there's no going back, and we lose our world-class facility," Deputy Mayor Jim Smith said.

After a few councillors toyed with the idea of holding a public hearing, Coun. Bill Karsten said citizens already expressed their disdain for the project at a hearing in 2005.

"Why would we want to go back to the public, and what — hope that they've changed their minds? The public spoke, and spoke clearly," he said.

THE PEOPLE HAVE SPOKEN

Councillors' salaries frozen

HRM councillors will not be getting a pay raise this year.

The citizens' commission presented a report to council last night recommending the remuneration formula remain the same.

"The existing process

... now allows representatives to perform their roles in a manner which is remunerated and supported appropriately and to the best ends of public interest," the report states.

The report also says pay should not increase after council shrinks.

The commission looked at other municipalities in the country as well as past HRM reports in order to reach its decision.

Run of the mill funded

► Province's $14M plan will keep woodlands operation viable until its sale

The Nova Scotia government says a plan to make sure the shuttered NewPage paper mill is kept ready to be sold is nearing completion.

Premier Darrell Dexter announced the plan more than a week ago as the money-losing mill won protection from its creditors in Nova Scotia Supreme Court.

The province says NewPage has agreed to the government's $14-million plan to keep the woodlands operation intact.

Use of funds

► The fund allows for new silviculture work, harvesting and stockpiling of wood, road maintenance and a forestry training program.

► The province's plan to make sure the NewPage mill in Port Tupper is ready for sale is almost complete.

The agreement has been filed with the court-appointed monitor for a hearing in Halifax on Friday under the Companies

Creditors Arrangement Act.

The province says a four-member committee — including representatives of the government, NewPage and the monitor — has been formed to oversee the fund and the work. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tories launch giant crackdown on crime

► Wide-ranging bill touches drugs, parolees, refugees, terrorism ► Critics say the measures just don't work

Drugs, refugees, parolees and terrorism.

The Conservative government touched them all when it introduced sweeping new criminal-justice changes yesterday.

But the Tories dismissed the cost to taxpayers and the downward direction of crime trends.

"We're not governing on the basis of the latest statistics," Justice Minister Rob Nicholson said in Brampton, Ont.

"We're governing on the basis of what's right to better protect victims and law-abiding Canadians."

Prime Minister Stephen Harper has moved to make good on an election promise to bundle a series of proposed measures as part of his self-described "tough-on-crime" agenda.

► "Canadians ... deserve to feel safe in their homes," Justice Minister Rob Nicholson said yesterday.

The 110-page omnibus bill tabled in the Commons affects nine pieces of existing legislation including changes to drug laws, youth sentencing, the pardons system, detention of refugees, parole and house

The government won praise from victims'-rights groups and at least two provinces.

An old NASA satellite, about the size of a bus, will come smashing into Earth this week.

But the U.S. space agency says not to worry.

The good news is the satellite has an estimated 3,200-to-one chance of killing or injuring someone.

The bad news is the debris could come down in Canada.

Peter Brown of the University of Western Ontario says current trajectory has the satellite landing anywhere between the 57th parallel in the north and 57th parallel in the south.

That means the only places in Canada outside the potential impact zone are the Northwest Territories and the Yukon.

Rest easy: Not only can the course change, but all indications suggest it's most likely to land in water.

"It can't be pinned down very accurately at this stage," Brown said. "Odds are it's (coming down) over the ocean."

Phil Langill of the Uni-

iversity of Calgary says the odds are "very, very good" debris will land in water because the satellite spends most of its time over the oceans.

NASA said the satellite is expected to re-enter the Earth's atmosphere on Friday, "plus or minus a day."

Choose a toilet: His, hers or LGBT

There are three toilet options now for revellers at a Rio de Janeiro shantytown's samba HQ: his, hers and LGBT (lesbian, bisexual, gay and transgender).

The president of the Rio samba group says the third option was added at the request of its transsexual members.

Roberto dos Santos says women didn't like transgender people using their bathroom, but the latter faced threats if they used the men's.

The group's carnival director, Carlos da Silva, hails the new option made available this week. He says people of all sexual orientations are more comfortable this way.

But the head of an LGBT-rights group, Marco Prado, says prejudice should be openly discussed instead of avoided by creating a separate bathroom.

Libyans flee siege in Gadhafi's hometown

► Ex-rebels claim control over much of southern city of Sirte ► Transitional government says it will press on with rebuilding efforts despite continued fighting

Families in pickup trucks stacked with mattresses and jugs of water fled Moammar Gadhafi's hometown of Sirte yesterday ahead of an expected new push by revolutionary forces to seize the city, as the anti-Gadhafi forces claimed progress in the battle for a city in the remote southern desert.

A commander of the new government's forces said late yesterday they were in control of most of the Gadhafi desert stronghold of Sabha after a day of fighting. The commander, Bashir Ahwaz, said most of the tribesmen loyal to Gadhafi fled the city instead of putting up a fight, but three of his men and 19 pro-Gadhafi tribesmen were killed.

He said it would take another week for his forces to take control of all of Libya's southern desert and its borders with Algeria and Niger. Several groups of officials from Gadhafi's regime, as well as one of the dictator's sons, have fled to Niger.

Earlier, residents fleeing Sirte said they had been living under a state of siege with Gadhafi's forces preventing them from leaving, while living conditions deteriorated and the city came under constant rocket fire and NATO bombardment. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canada's role

Prime Minister Stephen Harper confirmed yesterday his government will ask Parliament to extend the country's military mission in Libya for three more months.

► Harper expressed confidence that would be enough time to neutralize the threat posed by ousted dictator Moammar Gadhafi, who remains at large.

► Canada's second three-month commitment expires next week.

► Graffiti depicting Libya's ousted Moammar Gadhafi is seen on a street yesterday in Tripoli.

► A piece of graffiti comments on the Gadhafi regime's oil policy.

Public portraits of an unpopular leader

Libyan graffiti artists are taking advantage of newfound freedom to make fun of ousted leader Moammar Gadhafi on the streets of Tripoli.

For 42 years, the authoritarian leader banned writing or drawing on public walls. Artists are now expressing themselves throughout the capital of two million people, and their favourite topic is Gadhafi and other former members of his regime on storefronts and office buildings.

One picture mocks Gadhafi's habit of calling himself the king of kings of Africa by calling him the "monkey of monkeys of Africa." Another shows the longtime leader's public relations officer Youssef Shakhir with a rat's tail and holding prayer beads, because people said he always held them in appearances.

Gadhafi remains on the run after revolutionary forces swept into Tripoli on Aug. 21.

GINGER-SPERM BAN TURNING SOME HEADS

PAUL SULLIVAN
METRO

Redheads are special.

I know. I've been married to one for 33 years come Oct. 6. They're fiery, fierce, funny and fantastic. The air crackles as they walk down the street.

Some even come with an added bonus: freckles. I defy anyone to resist the charms of a fat-faced, green-eyed, red-headed mopet adorned with freckles.

It can't be done.

So what's with the world's largest sperm bank, the Danish firm of Cryos

International, turning red-headed donors away? Apparently the demand for green-eyed red-headed moppets adorned with freckles has dropped off, except in Ireland, where red-headed sperm sells like hotcakes according to the director, some guy named Ole (not to be confused with Olé, which ain't Danish).

The Irish breed as many redheads as four-leaf clovers, but there are also up to 18 million redheads in the U.S.A., and Scotland is the epicentre, where 13 per cent of the population sports a carrot top. But as the petri dish becomes the next cradle of humanity and people can choose their hue, redheads are in danger of being engulfed in a colour-biased wave of brown, black and blond.

The problem is obvious. Red-headed babies have an immediate high profile. It's impossible for them to blend in, to become part of the faceless crowd, as they shine like a copper star wherever they go. Most parents are inherently conservative. They don't want to raise kids who stand out just by standing there.

Why else would you name your kid Madison? Because all the others kids are called Madison.

You can't call a redhead Madison. That's a brunette name. A redhead is called Fergie, or maybe Gus. And definitely Colleen.

Take it from me. As you can tell from the photo that accompanies this column, I should be considered completely neutral on matters of hair. I'd be happy to have some, period. I dimly remember having brown hair, which clogged the drain for a few years before making an early exit. I think I'm what they call Black Irish, which is ridiculous as 99 per cent of me is pink, especially with prolonged exposure to the sun. Most redheads aren't so good in the sunlight either, as they don't need the competition.

We simply can't allow redheads to be eclipsed by reproductive science (talk about an oxymoron). We should all join the Red Headed League: Redheads of the world unite! It's time to stick up for the right to stick out.

AVATAR. The Walt Disney Co. said yesterday it has agreed on an exclusive deal to build attractions based on James Cameron's Avatar at its theme parks, starting with its Animal Kingdom park in Orlando, Fla.

Construction is set to begin in 2013 and is expected to be finished about three years after that.

The Avatar attraction is to be an immersive land spanning several acres and will cost less than half of the estimated $1 billion US it cost to expand Disney California Adventure Park, or around $400 million US.

CEO Bob Iger made the announcement at a news conference yesterday.

Cameron, who is working on the second and third instalments of the top-grossing film of all time, said the attractions would be a way to bring the lush world of Pandora to life, and would include animatronics and potential multimedia shows that use 3-D and holographic technology.

"This is a pretty darned exciting project," Cameron told reporters.

Something missing in the audience ... oh yeah, men

Turkey has come up with a radical solution for tackling crowd violence at soccer matches: ban the men and let only women and children in.

Under new rules approved by Turkey's soccer association, only women and children under the age of 12 will be admitted to watch games — for free — involving teams which have been sanctioned for unruly behaviour by their fans.

Yesterday, women formed long lines around Fenerbahce's Sukru Saracoglu stadium.

The game kicked off with Fenerbahce and Manisaspor players hurling flowers at the spectators. The visiting team was greeted with applause, instead of the usual jeering.

Fenerbahce was sanctioned by the association in July following trouble by fans who also attacked journalists for what they regarded as critical coverage of a match-fixing probe that involves the league champion.

Fenerbahce president Aziz Yildirim is among 30 suspects detained in the case.

It can talk, see, drive and no longer needs a human being to control it by remote. The car of the future — completely computer-controlled — is on the streets of Berlin.

All summer, researchers from the city's Free University have been testing the automobile.

The vehicle manoeuvres through traffic on its own using a sophisticated combination of devices, including a computer, electronics and a precision satellite navigation system in the trunk, a camera in the front, and laser scanners on the roof and around the front and rear bumpers.

"The vehicle can recognize other cars on the road, pedestrians, buildings and trees up to 70 metres around it and even see if the traffic lights ahead are red or green and react accordingly," explained Raul Rojas, the head of the university's research group for artificial intelligence.

"In fact, the car's recognition and reaction to its environment is much faster than a human being's reaction."

The scientists have worked on their research car, a Volkswagen Passat worth US $551,800 with lots of built-in special technology, for four years.

Several other groups have also been working on such technology recently, notably Google, which has been testing a robotic Toyota Prius in Nevada.

Tims truly exports itself

Tim Hortons' new Dubai location represents "the first true export of the brand," CEO Paul House said yesterday, but even after the outlet opened its doors to crowds of Canadian expatriates Saturday, the chain is not rushing toward a global presence.

"It's a historic moment," House said.

Though the chain has already opened extensive operations in the U.S., self-serve kiosks in the U.K., and a temporary location at the Kandahar Airfield in Afghanistan, this store is its first full-serve restaurant outside of North America.

The menu is identical, and although Dubai is a "mature" coffee market, with many Starbucks, Tims sees opportunity in its value-priced food options not readily available in the region, House said.

TV on phones means cash: BCE head

Real-time programming of sports and TV shows on mobile devices like smartphones and tablets will provide new revenue from consumers and other wireless providers, BCE chief executive George Cope said yesterday.

"I think that's a brand new stream for wireless going forward," Cope told a Goldman Sachs telecom conference in New York.

BCE Inc. recently bought the CTV assets that it didn't already own, providing the telecom giant with content, for example, from BNN, CTV News Channel, TSN, and RDS.

Consumers can sign up for the service and Bell can sell the content to other providers, Cope said, adding that Bell's content will be on TV sets, computers, tablets and smartphones.

BCE had 300,000 mobile TV subscribers in its second quarter, he added.

The Bell Media division said it will provide real-time content including prime time hits like Grey's Anatomy, The Amazing Race, Criminal Minds and Desperate Housewives.

Governments 'must act swiftly': Bank of Canada

Bank of Canada governor Mark Carney is issuing a call to action to governments and laying partial blame on their ineffectual responses so far for taking the world to the precipice of a new recession.

In a hard-hitting speech to a business crowd in Saint John, N.B., Carney said yesterday the combination of sovereign debt worries and bad politics have sapped investor confidence.

"The combination of high debt loads and unpredictable politics is toxic," he said.

The no-nonsense language highlights the importance Carney gives to the upcoming meetings of the G20 finance ministers and International Monetary Fund later this week. But it also underscores the gravity of the situation as he sees it.

Europe's fiscal and debt problems are serious but fixable, but governments must act swiftly to fix them, he said. He said the U.S. is

Walmart takes on Target

Walmart keeps prices at 10 per cent less than its retail rivals

Walmart Canada will target urban shoppers in its purchase of former Zellers stores under a deal with rival Target, as it also ramps up plans for renovations ahead of its competitor's arrival on Canadian soil.

David Cheesewright, chief executive of Walmart Canada, said yesterday the locations of the up to 39 stores it will acquire from Target will be revealed in the next few days.

Although the locations have been passed over by Target under its $1.8-billion deal with Hudson's Bay Co. to acquire the leases for up to 220 Zellers locations, Cheesewright said he's satisfied they are desirable.

"We'll only be focusing on sites where we don't have a Walmart nearby or it gives, particularly in urban areas, people access to Walmart who would have to drive a long way before," he

As for Target's 2013 Canadian launch, Cheesewright said Walmart isn't threatened because the retail landscape is already ultra-competitive. But he does concede that Walmart will "make a few tactical tweaks."

The chain's priority is developing supercentres, one-stop shops that offer groceries, low-priced clothing and household items.

Canada goes wireless

Several million Canadians will have only cellphone service by the end of the year as they increasingly ditch their more expensive landline telephones, suggests a new study.

About one in seven households — or two million in total — will have just cellphones by the end of 2011, the Convergence Consulting Group said yesterday.

"This is happening because prices have come down so radically," said Brahm Eiley, co-founder of the consulting firm.

Established wireless carriers Rogers, BCE and Telus started cutting prices on their discount-brand cellphones in 2008 — in some cases by more than 50 per cent, Eiley said.

New players like Wind Mobile, Mobilicity and Public Mobile have also added "all-you-can-eat" voice plans, he said. "So in effect, it's cheaper to have a wireless phone than it is to have a wireline phone," Eiley said.

"We're actually seeing an acceleration of wireless substitution in 2011, which we did not see previously in Canada."

Such trends are common in Europe, the U.S. and other parts of the world, where many younger consumers are choosing wireless service.

By the end of 2014, the Convergence Group estimates 26 per cent of Canadian homes will have only have mobile phone service.

In 2009, just 8.9 per cent of Canadians had ditched their landlines at home for cellphones, the study says. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Green energy lacks funding: Clinton

Former president Bill Clinton said yesterday that the success of the alternative-energy movement is hampered by a lack of financing. His comments came as world leaders attending his annual philanthropic conference expressed fears about rising seas.

The ex-president's three-day Clinton Global Initiative for VIPs with deep pockets began with a frank discussion about addressing global climate challenges, co-hosted by Mexican President Felipe Calderon and South African President Jacob Zuma.

There was a sense of frustration among the world leaders over the failure to create a legally binding world agreement on carbon emissions.

"We have seen much less progress than we hoped for," said Norwegian Prime Minister Jens Stoltenberg.

Pointing to Germany's successful creation of solar-energy jobs as a model for other nations, Clinton said the main issue with green energy is a lack of proper funding. "You have to come up with the money on the front end," Clinton said.

If you ever find yourself searching for the room where you're scheduled to interview Taylor Lautner, look for the one with the duo of hulking security guards suspiciously eyeing every room service attendant or housekeeper that walks down the hall. That's the place.

It makes sense that Lautner would need to take certain precautions given that he's been an international megastar since the age of 16, thanks to a little something called Twilight.

Now at the ripe old age of 19, with his time as werewolf Jacob Black wrapped on the final installment of the series and set to come to an end in November 2012, Lautner is looking to grow from teen idol to leading man with his first solo project, Abduction, an action adventure helmed by John Singleton.

Twilight franchise, one has to wonder if he isn't more than a little excited to escape certain byproducts of the series' success, like the hysterical screaming teens that swarm him wherever he goes.

Asked if he ever grows weary of hearing shrieks, he shakes his head.

"I love that noise," he smiles. "We feed off of their energy. When we walk into a room, an auditorium or a red carpet and there's thousands of fans screaming, it really gets us pumped. I remember the first time we ever heard it was at Comic Con for Twilight and we were like, 'Whoa! What is going on?' But now we're kind of used to it. We love it."

Leaving the Twilight series behind and embarking on more mature roles, Lautner has been hailed as "the next Tom Cruise," a distinction he embraces with a "Gee, shucks, me?" attitude.

"Tom Cruise has been my idol my entire life. I love his career path, his choices, so to have a tenth of the career Tom Cruise has had would be a dream for me," he offers shyly.

As an accomplished martial artist, Lautner is extremely physically capable and was thrilled to tackle the action sequences of Abduction, which included boxing, riding on the hood of a careening car and sliding down the sheer glass face of an escalator overhang.

"When I hear about the stunts that my character is going to do, I want to do them myself," Lautner beams.

METRO WORLD NEWS IN BOSTON

Jonah Hill is understandably a little hoarse when we meet up with him at the Four Seasons Hotel in Boston. The night before, he had been partying with the staff of the Harvard Lampoon in nearby Cambridge. "Oh my gosh, one of the best nights of my entire life," he says.

He gets a little starry eyed. "It was very inspirational because not only have a lot of the great comedy writers of our time and before passed through there and were a part of that organization, but it was inspirational and moving in that I always felt like, displaced a lot.

Because there weren't very many film people or comedy people really in my high school and college was kind of the same. I just would have felt so at home there. I got the feeling that gosh, I just felt like I would have thrived in that environment."

Regardless of oppressive environments of his past, Hill is thriving. He is starring in his first dramatic role, playing opposite Brad Pitt in the film adaptation of Michael Lewis' 2003 book, Moneyball.

I know you must be sick of talking about your weight, but could you give me a Cliffs-Notes' version?

I completely understand people's interest in it. I went to a nutritionist. I wanted to be healthier. It's really as simple as that. It's not that talking about it bothers me; it's just how uninteresting my answers are. I wish I had something more interesting to say.

At the Video Music Awards you made a crack that "people keep saying, 'now that you've lost weight, you're probably not funny anymore.' And then you go and do a dramatic film!

I just like all kinds of movies. To me it's about making good movies. I'm lucky enough to spend my life doing this, and I'd like to it when I'm an old man. I'd like to have a few DVDs — or whatever space technology they have — to show to my grandkids and go, "This is what I spent my life doing." Hopefully there's three or four in there that are just worthy of having said I spent my life doing something...

At what point did you know you wanted to try a drama?

I think I've always wanted to take this turn — it just had to be the right thing. ... With all these talented people, I mean it was a no brainer. The truth is I feel very similar right now at this moment in my career to how I did when Superbad was coming out, because Superbad was my introduction to people. I was this underdog, an unlikely star. I was not famous and I was the star of this big motion picture.

I was saying 'Hey, I'm Jonah. I'm in this movie. I'd like to do more of this and I hope you accept me.' And I got really lucky and it was really popular. But now when I'm in a comedy, you hear, "Jonah Hill is in a comedy," and it's not unexpected anymore. It's completely expected, and I feel grateful and lucky for that.

So now I feel the same way because I'm re-introducing myself by saying 'Hey, I'm Jonah and I'm in this different kind of movie that you're definitely not used to seeing me in, a different kind of performance. And I'd like to do more of this and I hope you accept me.' So it's a very surreal dreamlike experience.

MATH IN MOVIES IN FOCUS

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONWS.CA

Two plus two equals four isn't really a compelling idea for the plot of a movie, but filmmakers have often turned to mathematics as the basis for a story.

The Coen Brothers focused an entire film around the Uncertainty Principle in Quantum Mechanics. In A Serious Man Prof. Larry Gopnik (Michael Stuhlbarg) teaches his classes the principle, but desperately wants to believe, despite the equation, that life makes sense.

It's not a movie about wave-particle duality and the DeBroglie hypothesis — it's a very human story about a man searching for answers — but the math is crucial to the story.

The same holds true for Moneyball, the new Brad Pitt movie opening this weekend.

The story of a baseball team's general manager who uses algorithms and computer-generated analysis called sabermetrics to draft his players isn't strictly about the math, but the story wouldn't be the same without it.

A Beautiful Mind shows how mathematician John Nash, played by Russell

Crowe in the role that won him an Oscar, would visualize math problems in order to identify patterns and solve equations.

The Hangover uses a similar trick. At a Las Vegas casino Alan (Zach Galifianakis) counts cards at a blackjack table as mathematical equations appear on the screen.

In reality none of the equations — like the Fourier theory of additive synthesis — have anything to do with cheating at cards, but it's a funny scene that inspired the Facebook page "Alan from The Hangover makes math seem AWE-SOME."

A love poem called The Square Root of Three appears in the raunchy comedy Harold & Kumar Escape from Guantanamo Bay.

"I fear that I will always be a lonely number, like root three," writes the lovelorn Kumar (Kal Penn), "A three is all that's good and right. Why must my three keep out of sight?"

The Da Vinci Code famously uses the Fibonacci sequence — 1 - 1 - 2 - 3 - 5 - 8 - 13 - 21 — as a key to unlock the movie's mystery and Cube sees people trapped in a giant cube with mathematic problems as clues to their salvation.

The John Astin comedy Evil Roy Slade features some frontier math. Schoolteacher Betsy asks Roy, "If you had six apples and your neighbour took three of them what would you have?"

"A dead neighbour and all six apples," he replies.

METRO WORLD NEWS HOLLYWOOD

Harry Connick Jr. says working with his co-star everyday was "really incredible."

He's not talking about Morgan Freeman or Ashley Judd, although he enjoyed spending time on set with them.

No, he's referring to Winter, the titular star of his new film Dolphin Tale.

Winter is the real-life inspiration of the story of a bottlenose dolphin whose tail was lost in a crab trap.

Rescued and rehabilitated by the folks at the Clearwater Marine Aquarium, the giant marine mammal was equipped with a prosthetic tail which allows it to swim normally.

"I've been around dolphins before but there is something different about her. I guess it's because she's been so ultra socialized, she's been around so many different people since she was months old that maybe there is a different type of relationship she has with humans. I'm not sure. There is something you can feel. It's pretty cool."

Defining an 'X Factor'

- ▶ Simon Cowell looks for the next generation of singing stars on his new reality competition
- ▶ Why this isn't an American Idol clone

AMBER RAY
SCENE@METRONWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN NEW YORK

Simon Cowell, the ever-confident reality guru, is calling it now: The X Factor is going to be a huge hit.

"You do it because you want to be number one. You don't enter something for the silver medal." the TV producer/judge says of his expectations to not only meet the success of American Idol with his new venture, but surpass it.

"We're going to try and make it the best show on TV."

There's a lot on the line for the new talent competition, another singing contest Cowell has imported from Britain.

The winner is guaranteed $5 million cash in addition to a recording contract and a Pepsi-sponsored commercial to run during the Super Bowl.

"If I didn't think that the talent was worth $5 million in America, I wouldn't have made the show in America," the famously direct Brit says.

Despite its pedigree, Cowell insists that this is not an Idol clone. The X Factor is open to both solo artists and groups, ages 12 and up.

Contestants will be broken up into four categories: girls ages 12 and 30, boys ages 12 and 30, individuals over 30, and groups.

Also, the judges panel — including Cowell, Idol mate Paula Abdul, former Pussycat Doll Nicole ▶ Nicole Scherzinger, left, Steve Jones, Simon Cowell, Paula Abdul and L.A. Reid are judge-mentors on X Factor. The show premieres tonight on CTV.

Scherzinger and record producer L.A. Reid — will serve as mentors.

"We see this as a game-changer," Cowell says. "We're going to try and find a completely different kind of contestant. Our job as judges is to find people

"I've been in that exact place. That's how I got my start 10 years ago, through that exact audition process on Popstars, and I know exactly what they are going through. I come from a different place of compassion and understanding."

NICOLE SCHERZINGER ON EMPATHIZING WITH CONTESTANTS

who've got star quality, and turn them into stars.

Paula speaks

Paula Abdul weighs in on the caliber of singers auditioning for The X Factor.

▶ "[The contestants] understand the savvy business of the record business, of having to have your own definitive, unique, something special that is not copycat to other artists. And they come in, and it's that feeling that I've wanted to feel as a judge even through all of the years of American Idol, that I'm discovering something I have never seen before."

And I've got a panel who can do that."

► Charlie Sheen

► Troubled actor is being pretty nice about his old show — could it have to do with his sweet payout?

Charlie Sheen has been making nice with his former show, Two and a Half Men — offering kind words at the Emmys and tweeting about watching the season 9 premiere — and now we know why. Sheen has reached a settlement with Warner Bros. over his dismissal from the show earlier this year, and according to TMZ the actor will get an immediate $25 million payout, plus about $100 million in syndication profits over the next 10 years.

‘I often dream of quitting acting’: Michelle Williams

Despite the acclaim she’s been receiving for her upcoming films, Michelle Williams admits she’s been fantasizing about leaving acting behind. “I often dream of quitting acting. Walking away and becoming a laundress or a sous chef, or maybe writing other people’s love letters for a living,” Williams tells Hobo magazine. “Clearly, I don’t like to be in charge.” But don’t go writing the My Week with Marilyn star off just yet, as she admits that “thinking of quitting is just keeping going in disguise.” ● METRO

Sarah Hyland dukes it out with fans of Glee star on Twitter

Modern Family star Sarah Hyland has found herself in a war of words on Twitter with fans of Glee star Lea Michele after Hyland mocked Michele’s red carpet poses while guest-hosting Fashion Police on the E! network. “I did not intend for my comments to be taken in a malicious way. But I did hate the dress. Called her ass great. Did you all hear that one?” Hyland tweeted in response to rabid Michele fans, who also accused Hyland of being jealous of Michele’s success. “In no way am I jealous of Lea Michele,” Hyland shot back. “I’m happy with my own life and am not jealous of anyone else’s in the world.” ● METRO

Entourage will hit big screen

There’s been speculation about an eventual Entourage movie now that the HBO series has ended, and executive producer Mark Wahlberg is happy to confirm it. “Yes, for sure. Yes,” he tells Hollyscoop when asked if the jump to the big screen is taking place. Wahlberg says that all the events of the series finale leave the characters “teed up for a movie.”

There’s no word on when the film would go into production at this time.

Google is elevating the quality of its search results for airline tickets. Its revised approach to airfare queries appeared Tuesday in a newly opened "flights" section of Google.com. Your first day in Arizona, in the heart of the Sierra Ancha's stones, try gearing up with a wetsuit and a helmet to inspect the Salome Canyon underworld. Scramble and swim in some of the most spectacular natural playgrounds in the world. At times down in the canyon, you will be able to touch both granite walls rising 200-feet above you and rappel a 40-feet rushing waterfall.

Spend a divine night at the luxury Royal Palms Resort and Spa, and wake up early to climb the Camelback Mountain in Phoenix. Imagine the sensation of making one with the mountain, of floating like a bold eagle above the rocks while admiring the sunrise on the city. Take the afternoon to go deeper in the Sonora desert and hike among the boulders.

On day four, you will board a Cessna (a four-seater plane) to fly over the Grand Canyon. In the Grand Canyon National Park, sore muscles permitting, you will embark on a 1200-foot descent down the canyon. It's a spectacular trek through more than 40 million years of geological history.

The must-see bands of Pop Montreal

► Pop Montreal kicks off today and features almost 200 musical acts ► Here's a look at some of the highlights

LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

POP Montreal's acts range from underground local artists, hip American bands and Montreal's biggest musical ambassadors.

Arcade Fire, Wednesday at Metropolis, Thursday at

Place Des Festivals

Maybe you've heard of these guys? They started around here. Not ringing any bells? They play anthemic indie rock that earned them a Grammy for Album of the Year and the Polaris Music Prize earlier this week. If you still haven't heard them, you're probably not going to their super exclusive Wednesday night show, but maybe you might try checking them out for their free show on Thursday.

You know, you really might like them. A lot of people do!

Jeff the Brotherhood, Thursday at Club Soda

Brothers Jake and Jamin Orrall have a contagious restless energy that feels like the band you wish you were in when you were in high school. Or even the band that you wish went to high school with you. They may have left high school years ago, but that adolescent excitement for rock 'n' roll hasn't left them. Beneath this Nashville stoner sound is a songwriting and production sensibility that is a joy to behold.

Dirty Beaches, Friday at Il Motore

When people talk about the garage rock revival, they should definitely be ► POP Montreal starts today and runs until Sunday.

mentioning this Montreal minimalist, not just because the fidelity sounds like he literally recorded his songs in a garage, but because he sings with a be-bop-a-lula of a voice against a backing that sounds like Suicide.

Stephen Malkmus and the Jicks, Friday, Théâtre Corona
The former Pavement frontman is as witty as ever on the new Mirror Traffic album, populating it with folk who go streaking in their Birkenstocks and are down with "soft rap."

Yuck, Saturday at Cabaret du Mile-End

If you like a thick wall of fuzzy guitar and pretty whispered melodies, then Yuck will make you say, "Yum."

Boot Camp Click, Saturday at Underworld

The diversity of this Brooklyn act is well represented by the diversity of the names they have chosen for themselves. There's Buckshot, Smif N Wessun, Rock and Sean Price. Isn't it cool that in such a pedigreed hip-hop group, one guy would have the audacity to use his birth name? Their beats and rhymes are just as bold.

Girls, Sunday at Théâtre Corona

This California band plays a style of music we like to call Oldies on Drugs. They use 1950s jukebox structures for a lot of their songs, but their lyrics are often about getting high. Their brand new album, Father, Son, Holy Ghost is the logical comedown from their sunny debut, Album, and it feels good to feel bad.

Literally millions of tourists flock to the famous Kilauea Volcano every year, making it the most-visited tourist attraction in Hawaii, eclipsing even the Pearl Harbour memorial on Oahu.

After leaving the city of Hilo, and climbing 4,000 feet straight up, my first reaction after arriving at Kilauea was just how black and barren it is. Hundreds of miles of black rivers of lava flow frozen in time, flooding the landscape.

Always one to bring back a memento or two, I decided to break myself off a few tiny pieces of black lava to bring home as a souvenir. I soon found out this is a very big no-no! A park guide soon rushed right over and insisted I empty my pockets of the new-found rubble.

It seems ancient tradition dictates that taking any lava rocks away from the sacred volcano site will bring horrible luck and great misfortune to any poor soul that does so. In fact, there is a huge pile of returned lava rocks at the entrance of Volcano National Park put there by people who made the mistake of not heeding the warning!

Despite the fact there is enough erupted material here to pave a road around the world three times over, those rocks stay put... forever.

The Kilauea Volcano has been constantly erupting since 1983, and it really is a thrill to be right there in the thick of it. It's also considered the most dangerous volcano in the U.S., so admittedly I was treading a bit gingerly as I approached the actual fire show.

What followed was one

► The Kilauea Volcano has been constantly erupting since 1983.

of the most amazing sites these jaded eyes have ever seen. Huge rivers of red-hot liquid lava flowing slowly down cliffs, and then suddenly exploding in huge plumes after making contact with the ocean.

This is a place everyone should make a pilgrimage to. Just don't steal the rocks.

Savoury apple sensations

► When it comes to apples, don't limit yourself to thinking sweet ► These recipes for Apple Cheddar Puffs and Apple Kielbasa Bake prove this fruit has a place at the dinner table

With the onset of apple season, it's time to start thinking about ways to use up all those bushels you bring home from your picking adventures.

While sauces and pies are a fine start, it's also easy to get creative with how we cook apples. And you don't need to limit yourself to sweets.

Apple Cheddar Puffs

Preparation:

- 1 Heat oven to 220 C (425 F). Line 2 baking sheets with parchment paper.
- 2 In saucepan over medium-high, heat water, butter and salt until boiling. Add flour and stir vigorously with wooden spoon until mix comes away from sides of pan and forms a ball of dough, about 1 min.
- 3 Transfer dough to bowl of electric mixer. Mix with paddle attachment 1 min. Add eggs, one at a time, waiting until fully incorporated before adding next. When all of the eggs are incorporated, mix in cheese.

► Make 24 puffs with this recipe.

- 4 Spoon mix into large zip-close bag with corner cut off or pastry bag. Gently squeeze bag to create walnut-size mounds on prepared baking sheets, leaving 5 cm (2 inches) between each mound. Bake 10 mins, then reduce oven temperature to 190 C (375 F) and bake for another 15 minutes or until golden brown.
- 5 Remove puffs from oven and pierce side of each to allow steam to escape. Let cool, then use.
- 6 While puffs bake, make filling. In saucepan over medium-high, cook apples, sugar, ginger, lemon juice, salt and 30 ml (2 tbsp) of water just until apples are tender, about 6 mins. In glass, stir remaining 30 ml (2 tbsp) water and cornstarch, add to apples. Bring to simmer and cook just until mixture thickens, 1 to 2 mins. Let cool slightly

Ingredients:

Puffs

- 250 ml (1 cup) water
- 90 ml (6 tbsp) unsalted butter
- 5 ml (1 tsp) salt
- 325 ml (1 1/3 cup) all-purpose flour
- 5 eggs
- 250 ml (1 cup) grated extra-sharp cheddar cheese

Filling

- 4 Golden Delicious apples, peeled, cored and diced
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) sugar
- 5 ml (1 tsp) grated fresh ginger
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) lemon juice
- Pinch salt
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) water, divided
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) cornstarch before using. The mix can also be refrigerated up to 24 hours prior to adding to the puffs. If so, rewarm before use.

- 7 To fill puffs, cut each in half horizontally. Spoon a small amount of filling into bottom of shell, then replace top half of shell. Serve warm or at room temperature.

The first woman to appear on the cover of Drum World magazine, Patty Schemel's musical career is jammed with noteworthy moments. Drummer, composer, singer and sometimes guitar player in Courtney Love's seminal rock band Hole, an original member of Doll Squad, a close friend and collaborator of Kurt Cobain, and also featured on the cover of Rolling Stone magazine, Schemel wrote and played music that arguably defined an American generation.

Openly gay, but unwilling to let it dominate her image, Schemel helped 'normalize' lesbians in pop culture. Hit So Hard documents her journey through talent, achievement, betrayal, addiction and finally ... survival.

TOMMY TAM
TALENTEGG.CA

Most college and university students start their summer job search in February. But actually, job searching much earlier — in September — can lead to summer employment.

In the beginning of September 2010, I began looking for work-study positions at my university. The Federal Work-Study Program allows students like me to gain some extra cash while still putting school as their first priority.

The program restricts students to a maximum of 12 working hours per week and usually runs from September to early March.

► Tommy Tam knows first-hand what staying ahead of the pack can do for the career-minded student.

After sending my résumé and cover letter to a few work-study positions, I was invited for an interview and was granted the position of Research Assistant at the Department of Health Policy, Management and Evaluation (HPME).

I truly enjoyed my time and my work with the professor and her team, but found myself searching for a summer job as April 2011 came around.

To my surprise, my professor offered to hire me from May to August, as a summer student with her team.

And even more amazing than that, I was accepted as a graduate student in that same department! Searching for jobs early on in September really paid off.

Based on my experience, I would recommend career centres continue actively promoting and advertising the Federal Work-Study Program so that students can be informed of these types of opportunities.

The Federal Work-Study Program has worked wonders for my career and I sincerely hope that it will do the same for others as well.

I also hope that my fellow students learn how important it is to start your job search early, in September when companies are hiring students who are going to graduate that year. Students often start their job search in February or even later on in the year but I hope I can encourage students to start their job searches as early as possible.

Key take-aways from Tommy's experience:

- Don't leave job-searching to the last minute. If you want a job after graduation, then start applying when employers are hiring: in September.
- Networking is vital to landing any job — if employers can put a face to a name, you'll stand out from the numerous resumés they receive every day.

Last week I introduced you to my favourite workplace “losers”: those people who just love to fail, and why their idiosyncrasies often cost them their own cases. But Canadian workplaces have a number of “winners” as well. These people play the game right and they often come out ahead. Here are some of their winning attributes:

The Peacemaker
Companies do not value

employees who create or participate in stupid arguments as much as those that avoid them. The Peacemaker understands this concept and avoids workplace quarrels, especially those between colleagues and he or she never takes sides in a meaningless dispute. Rather, the Peacemaker offers an objective opinion and unbiased advice.

The Stoic

Employees have a tendency to seek instant gratification, usually to their own detriment. When they are denied a raise or a promotion, most will complain and they will do so immediately. The problem with them, however, is not what they say it is when they say it. But the Stoic is different. He or she is cool under pressure and patient when it matters most. More importantly, the Stoic understands when not to complain.

The Opportunist

In law, just like in life, timing is everything. The Opportunist knows this concept well and lurks for an opportunity to take advantage of a good situation. The Opportunist may not be the best at whatever he or she does at work but by being in the right place at the right time, they get credit from their employers.

No one likes a grouch at work. This is not news to the Optimist, because he or she is valued by an employer for their positive attitude, even if this attitude is sometimes a facade.

Joy returns to Crosby's game

► Penguins star skating hard in training camp ► Still questionable for season opener Oct. 6 vs. Canucks

Sidney Crosby was uncommonly upbeat a few minutes before his fourth training camp practice in as many days, regularly flashing smiles yesterday while fending off the playful kidding of his Pittsburgh Penguins teammates.

The reason for Crosby's cheerfulness seems evident. He appears to be getting closer to being cleared for contact — the biggest remaining hurdle as he recovers from a concussion that has sidelined the Penguins' star for 8 ½ months. "I'm pretty happy with the way they've gone so far," Crosby said of the on-ice workouts.

That was evident as he skated full speed through another all-out practice, this time with co-star Evgeni Malkin skating alongside him in the same group. Malkin is recovering from knee surgery.

Crosby hasn't backed off any drill, except those that require contact. But he hasn't appeared reluctant to engage in contact, skating just as hard into the corners as any of his teammates during drills.

Crosby clearly has progressed significantly from a few weeks ago when he was forced to cut back on conditioning work due to concussion-related side-effects that occurred once he reached the 90 per cent exertion rate.

During camp, the Cole Harbour product has been going full speed full time

"I've never taken it for granted, that's one thing for sure. I think it's like anything in life. When you don't have it, you realize how much you miss it."

SIDNEY CROSBY ON SPENDING TIME AWAY FROM HOCKEY WHILE INJURED

with no symptoms.

"That's the optimistic thing about seeing Sid out there. It's tough," coach Dan Bylsma said. "It's not a practice toward the end of the year where the heart rate is not getting near max."

"You're getting maxed out and you push through fatigue ... He's getting tired and he's working just like every other guy out there."

When camp started Saturday, Bylsma didn't commit to Crosby being available for every practice, saying only he was day-to-day.

Crosby still won't guess when he might be cleared for hitting during camp, saying, "No clue." But there are numerous signs it could be relatively soon.

"The practices I've been in have been pretty tough, pretty intense," Crosby said. "But I think everyone's kind of felt that way, so I don't feel like I'm too far behind."

"That being said, hitting kind of throws a in whole different element. It makes ► Fans take photos Sidney Crosby at training camp in Pittsburgh on Saturday.

it a little bit more difficult."

Crosby was making it look easy until hard hits in successive games Jan. 1 and Jan. 5 gave him his first career concussion and ended his season. He had 32 goals and 66 points in 41 games and was on pace for the highest scoring total by an

NHL player in 15 years.

He is eager to see if he can return to that level.

"I'd love to be able to say that the first game, I'm right back where I left off. But it's probably pretty unrealistic," he said. "It might take some time."

"With that being said, that's where I want to be. That's probably the best I've felt since I've played in the NHL and that's where I want to get to. How long that will take, I don't know. But I'm going to do my best to get back there as soon as I can."

Jets' Byfuglien faces charges for alleged impaired boating

A police drug recognition expert concluded that Winnipeg Jets defenceman Dustin Byfuglien was under the influence of drugs when police stopped the boat he was driving on a Minnesota lake last month.

Byfuglien is facing four charges that include boating while under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs. The documents detailing the charges say an officer had stopped the boat because the craft was operating without proper lights.

"Mr. Byfuglien's speech was slurred, he was unsteady on his feet, his eyes were bloodshot and watery and he smelled of a consumed alcoholic beverage," says the arresting officers statement, obtained by The Canadian Press. "Mr. Byfuglien was unable to successfully perform field sobriety tests as requested."

Red Sox fans facing a conundrum

► ‘Even if it hurts the Sox, you never root for the Yankees,’ says fan ► Boston up two games in wild-card

Things were looking dire for the Boston Red Sox when they dropped three-of-four games to Tampa Bay and the opener of a doubleheader against last-place Baltimore on Monday.

Fans were booing, panicking and ready to give up.

But they weren't willing to take the most drastic measure of all: Rooting for the New York Yankees when they play the Rays seven times over the next nine days.

“Absolutely not. Anybody that's going to beat the Yankees, I don't care,” said Pat Smith, a plumber from Cambridge, Mass., who watched the Red Sox lose to the Orioles on Monday afternoon — their 12th loss in 15 games. “Even if it hurts the Sox, you never root for the Yankees. I'm sorry. I don't care.”

The Red Sox led the AL East for much of the summer, and appeared ready to coast into the playoffs with a nine-game lead over Tampa Bay in the wild-card race Sept. 3.

But the Rays beat Boston six times in seven games over a 10-day span, trimming the deficit to two games. Tampa Bay remain two games behind Boston for the AL wild-card after a 5-0 loss in New York last night. The Red Sox lost to the Orioles 7-5.

Before heading to New York for four games in three days, Rays manager Joe Maddon was asked if he ever thought he could turn a ballpark full of 37,000 Bostonians into Yankees fans.

“That's improbable, isn't it?” he said. “It's not just 37,000, it's 37 in the ballpark and millions more in the nation.”

The Red Sox-Yankees rivalry hit its most recent peak in back-to-back AL championship series matchups in 2003-04. The Red Sox lost the first one with a spectacular collapse, but then won the next year coming back from down 0-3 in the series en route to their first World Series title in 86 years.

Stampeders prepare for eastern initiation

The Americans on the Calgary Stampeders are about to get a geography lesson on just how big Canada is from west to east.

The Stampeders depart today for Moncton to prepare for Sunday's Scotiabank Touchdown Atlantic game against the Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Some players may be amazed to find out they can fly for seven hours and still be in the same country.

Receiver Nik Lewis estimates 90 per cent of the Stampeders haven't been further east than their annual road trip to Montreal.

“It's a long way, especially being from Texas where I'm two hours from Mexico,” he said.

Quarterback Henry Burris travelled to Moncton in April for promotional appearances and says his non-Canadian teammates are about to get an education.

“For me, it was a great time out there,” Burris said. “The size of the country, it's so much bigger than the U.S. You truly don't realize until you fly out there, but it's such a beautiful country out there, a beautiful province. To be able to have a team out there would be a beautiful thing.”

“A lot of guys don't even know what New Brunswick is. They think it's a company that makes bowling balls.”

CALGARY QB HENRY BURRIS

By staging the regular-season game in Moncton, the CFL is not only looking to promote its brand in Eastern Canada but also gauge interest in a potential expansion franchise there. However, many challenges exist, not the least of which is the construction of a 25,000-seat stadium.

The Edmonton Eskimos beat the Toronto Argonauts 24-6 last year at Moncton Stadium, which sold out around 21,000 seats on the University of Moncton campus.

A Stampeders player who will feel almost at home Sunday is Justin Conn, a line-backer from New Maryland, N.B.

Conn's hometown is near Fredericton.

The Bishop's University product has been talking up the advantages of playing a game at a lower altitude — almost 1,000 metres lower than Calgary — to his Stampeders teammates.

“That's what I said to them, ‘We're up high here and we're going to go there and feel like we're in the best shape of our lives,’” Conn said.

Motor

The iMiEV's 49-kilowatt (66-horsepower) electric motor is located in the rear and directs its 145 pound-feet of torque to the rear wheels.

The iMiEV's top speed is 130 km/h, but driving at that velocity for any length of time will quickly sap its 330-volt lithium-ion battery pack positioned beneath the passenger floor.

Mitsubishi places the typical range at about 135 kilometres per charge, less than the 160 kilometres claimed by the Nissan Leaf and other electrics.

Charge time

A 240-volt home charging system will top up the iMiEV in about six hours. Plug it into a regular 120-volt home outlet, however, and it's an agonizingly-long 22.5 hours. That doesn't leave much time in the day for driving.

What will eventually be needed is a network of public charging stations that allow all electric vehicle owners to top up the batteries in the shortest possible time.

Space

The iMiEV's true purpose is abundantly clear: a short-haul urban commuter pod that can also tackle more mundane chores.

It will easily accommodate four adults as long as they're packing light. However with only the front seats in use, cargo capacity with the 50:50 rear seatbacks folded flat matches the space available in the larger Nissan Leaf.

MALCOLM GUNN
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA
WHEELBASE MEDIA

There's a revolution under way, and it's being fought with volts and kilowatts. This is the new-age arsenal of which those shopping for electrically powered automobiles such as Mitsubishi's iMiEV will become increasingly familiar.

The iMiEV hatchback

Lean, green cuisine

that's scheduled to arrive here in late 2011 joins the all-electric Nissan Leaf and Tesla roadster plus the gasoline-supported Chevrolet Volt as pioneers in the automotive clean-energy movement. Additional models, including the Mini E and

Smart Fortwo Electric, are currently (pun intended) in limited production, while Ford's Transit Connect van and compact Focus will become electrified for the 2012 model year. Other automakers, both large and small, have similar plans to join the electric motorpool.

At this point, the iMiEV will be one of the smallest electrical offerings to be mass produced for general consumption. But in terms of accommodations and price, it should prove to be one of the more attractive.

The lightweight (1,180 kilograms) and efficiently designed iMiEV is bound to succeed on price alone. The fact that its minimalist and futuristic styling will play well with the eco crowd should help keep Mitsubishi's green machine solidly in the black right from the outset.

Revolution? Ready, aim, charge.

Taking a place above the Grand Cherokee in the Jeep brand's product line-up, the Commander was available from 2006 to 2010 inclusive. Based on the Grand Cherokee, it was blockier looking, bigger, and boasted three rows of seating and room for seven occupants.

Commander packed plenty of capability and traction on the road less travelled with the Quadra Drive II 4x4 system on board.

Look for features like heated leather seats, navigation, a driver computer, parking sensors, power accessories, remote entry, a sunroof and plenty more.

2006 to 2010 Jeep Commander

Engine

Look for a 3.7-litre V-6 with 210 horsepower, or a 4.7-litre V-8 with 235 horsepower until 2008, and 305 horsepower thereafter. Chrysler's 5.7-litre HEMI V-8 with 330 or 357 horsepower was also available, depending on the year. All models got an automatic transmission.

What owners like Owners praise the stereo system, interior and exterior styling, and performance with the HEMI V-8. A comfortable ride, towing power, the braking system and Commander's off-road capability are also highly rated.

What owners dislike

Comfort and space in the Commander's second and third seating rows are common gripes, as is fuel economy and rearward visibility.

Common issues

Some issues have been reported with electronics, suspension and other systems by owners in online forums, though a Jeep mechanic should be able to check for and diagnose any of the Commander's common problems.

One such problem is a random engine stall-out situation that poses a safety risk. This could be caused by a transmission fluid filter or overly sensitive ignition switch. Ask the vehicle's seller if they've ever experienced this sort of problem.

Verdict

It's primarily styling, towing ability and off-road capability that will draw used vehicle shoppers to the Commander. If you're looking for good fuel mileage, you'd best move to another model.

Is light the right way?

► Spare tires replaced by air pumps as automakers shed weight to improve mileage ► But there are some who don't agree with the trend

Say you just bought a new car, and the right front tire goes flat as you're driving down the freeway.

Don't be surprised if there's no spare when you look in the trunk.

This year, more than 14 per cent of new models on sale in the United States came with liquid tire sealant and a portable electric air pump instead of a spare, a trend that is growing as automakers try to shed pounds and boost gas mileage.

But there can be problems. While the sealant works well in most cases, you could be stuck on the shoulder if the hole that caused the flat is larger than a quarter of an inch, or if the puncture is on the side of the tire. In those cases, the only option is to have your car towed, and you may have to wait for a repair shop to track down a new tire.

Extra cost

GM, like many automakers, offers car buyers the option of getting a spare tire, charging $100 to $150 more for them.

"The last thing you want to do is find out the hard way that you don't have a spare tire if you're stranded on the side of the road," said Gene Petersen, tire program leader for Consumer Reports magazine.

However, General Motors Co., Hyundai Motor Co. and other automakers that use the pump-and-sealant kits say they have many advantages, mainly the weight savings. The kits are about nine kilograms lighter than a temporary spare and the jack and other tools needed to put on the tire. Also, the inflator kits don't take up as much room in the trunk, leaving more space for luggage or other cargo.

GM, which has made inflators and sealant standard on all but five of its 22 U.S. car and crossover models, said the kits can fix 85 per cent of tire punctures. They're easy to use, even for someone who might be afraid of changing a tire, and they're safer because tires can be quickly refilled, getting the driver off the roadside and back in traffic faster than putting on a spare, said Dave Cowger, GM's tire engineering group manager.

Hyundai says the inflator kits help avoid another problem: getting dirty while changing a tire yourself. All you do is attach some tubes and fill the tire with sealant and air.

GM's market research, Cowger said, shows that half of consumers would call for roadside assistance rather than using a spare.

Still, for the 85 per cent of flats that the sealant can fix, there are 15 per cent that it can't.

That's why Honda Motor Co. uses spares on all its 2011 models, spokesman Chuck Schifsky said.

"An actual spare tire is the best backup system should a customer have a

what the tire sealant and pump systems can repair." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VOLKSWAGEN PUSHES FOR NO. 1 STATUS

@METRONEWS.CA

All the big cheeses at big automotive companies are male. I think that's why we always hear talk about who is – or who is gunning to be – the world's No. 1 automaker.

It has something to do with sales and profits, yes, but a bit more to do with testosterone. The latest “king of the hill” rhetoric emanated from the Frankfurt Auto Show, which is in full swing this week.

Volkswagen issued a statement at the show, detailing how they plan to spend 62.4 billion euros (about $84 billion) in the coming five years to boost its worldwide production.

Currently the VW group, which includes VW, Audi, Skoda and Seat brands, ranks third in the world motor vehicle production rankings. But it wants the No. 1 status, currently held by Toyota. Also ahead of VW at the moment, is No. 2 man, General Motors.

Yes, that same General Motors that filed for bankruptcy protection back in 2009.

“Top of the agenda for us are investments in environmentally-friendly, sustainable models and drives,” noted CEO Martin Winterkorn, in VW’s statement.

One of those sustainable models sure to drive future volume is the VW Up, shown for the first time in production trim at the show in Frankfurt. The “mini” or “city” Up is a class smaller than Golf, so we probably won’t see it here in North America, which would be a shame, because it’s looks pretty good.

And where VW is adding future production speaks volume about which world markets are expected to produce the most incremental sale growth in future years. Those markets would be China, Russia, etc., and North America and Europe not so much.

I guess being No. 1 would be a good thing for any automaker, but I sometimes wonder if people forget about the baggage that comes with being No. 1 at anything.

It doesn’t take long before the cooler kids start looking the other way, or throw rocks at you when you’re not looking, because you are now the boring establishment, and had it coming. And you can forget about having any “underdog” support you once enjoyed.

So go ahead, take your place at the top of the hill if you want to, just bring a helmet.

Recycling your ride

▶ During this stage of the recycling process, what's left of a car is referred to as the hulk.

▶ Behold ... The final resting place of your deceased vehicle

Once considered scrap, end-of-life cars are now considered an asset, dismantled and sold for the value of their parts and metal. It’s a process that involves both reuse and recycling once they go to their final resting place.

Some 1.2 million vehicles come off the road in Canada every year, according to Steve Fletcher, managing director of the Automotive Recyclers of Canada. Good recyclers will get as much as they can from each one.

“First, they’ll remove any parts that can be directly resold,” he says.

“Engines, transmissions, mirrors, taillights, anything that doesn’t have to be reworked and can be directly reused.”

Next, the recycler drains the 20 to 40 litres of fluid that each one may hold, including gasoline, antifreeze, transmission oil, brake fluid, washer fluid and engine oil. Fluids that are fresh enough are used in company vehicles, while old or excess liquids are sold for recycling or reuse.

DRIVING FORCE

JIL McINTOSH

“We’re paid six to eight cents a litre for oil,” Fletcher says; it will be re-refined into recycled oil or burned in asphalt furnaces.

“We want the lead acid battery, not just for the environmental reasons, but because it’s worth $4 to $5 as a core that can be refurbished,” Fletcher says.

Freon is extracted from the a/c system using special equipment, and is either sold or reused.

Recyclers also check for mercury-filled switches, which were used in some older vehicles to activate the under-hood light, and which must be handled as toxic waste.

“From here, the recyclers start to take it down by the metal,” Fletcher says. “That’s anything like the copper in radiators, or aluminum in the wheels or engine.”

What’s left is called the hulk and it’s flattened in a giant press, mainly to make it more convenient to ship. If the seats, trim or windshield weren’t good enough to reuse, they’re simply left in and pressed during the process.

From there, the hulk is shipped to a facility that shreds it into fist-sized chunks. Magnets and other secondary recovery systems such as pressurized air are used to separate the metals, which are then sent for recycling, while foam, carpet and glass go to landfill.

“On an average vehicle, you’ll get 75 per cent recycled as metal,” Fletcher says. “Once you factor in the parts we take out, such as tires and (reusable) parts, up to 83 per cent of the vehicle is recycled. You get about $500 to $600 for the metal in a flattened hulk for about $100 in time and effort, so a car has positive value.”
